

❖ General Information

☒ Learning Resources

▪ Library

The University Library is a major resource library which offers core services for learning and research. Many students spend a considerable amount of their time in the Library and make use of its substantial and growing number of online resources. Our Library has access to more than 30,000 full text electronic journals, and more than 55,000 electronic books to complement its printed materials.

▪ Computing Facilities

Information technology plays a vital role in research and teaching. Computers and workstations are available in most labs, classrooms, and cafes on campus. All computers in labs provide Internet access, e-mail, Microsoft Office 2003, and many other programs. Laptops could be connected to the wireless network on campus.

▪ Research Centers

As befits a University with an international reputation, the primary purpose of Jordan's University of Science and Technology is to advance and disseminate learning in the forms of research and scholarship. Training and supervision in research methodology, especially for postgraduate students, is reinforced by several research centers, such as: Queen Rania Al-Abdullah Centre for Environmental Science & Technology, Consultative Centre for Science and Technology, Energy Centre, Pharmaceutical Research Centre, Biotechnology Centre, the Agricultural Centre for Research & Extension, and Nanotechnology Center.

☒ Academic Counseling

Since its establishment, the university has placed students' counseling in the forefront of its priorities. The chairman of the department acts as a chief advisor to the students, and ensures that all students' academic difficulties are overcome. He is assisted by panels of advisors who are members of the teaching staff. Every student in the university is assigned to an advisor who follows up his academic progress, controls courses registration and informs him of any changes in the academic regulations or study plans.

The university administration realizes that a simple problem, if not dealt with, promptly can often become complex and more intractable quite quickly. So it keeps the doors of the Dean of Students' Affairs and his assistants always opened to any student who wishes to discuss any personal or academic problem.

☒ International Students' Office (ISO)

In a highly competitive job market in Jordan as well as in other countries, JUST graduates are well equipped with knowledge and skills required for the international business market. This reputation has attracted an increasing number of international students not only from the Middle East but also from other countries all over the world. The students' body represents (54) nationalities. This diversity, multiculturalism and pluralism contributes to the ambiance that makes JUST a unique higher education institution.

The number of international students enrolled during the academic year 2009/2010 reached a total of (5100) students in the undergraduates level and (324) students in the graduate. This number represents more than (25%) of the University students' population.

Taking this into consideration, JUST realized that international students have special issues and concerns from those of most students. For that. The international Students' Office (ISO) which is connected directly with the University President was established inside the University campus. It is the first place for international students to contact for information and support.

Qualified coordinators and student's affairs staff have been assigned to the office to provide full range of consultation services including: accommodation, cultural, social and legal, in addition to organizing trips, social events, and meetings with the president.

JUST values and encourages the University's mix of Jordanian and international students to create a positive learning environment.

The office is opened Sunday through Thursday from 8:00 am to 5:00 pm, and the office employees are always pleased to listen to inquiries and concerns.

☒ Civil Society Development Center (CSDC)

The Civil Society Development Center is an interdisciplinary educational entity based at JUST. In accordance with the university's mission of achieving academic excellence, the center aims to increase the knowledge and abilities of the university's community and surrounding societies to meet current and future development challenges. This is achieved through the promoting of attitudes and ethics conducive to independent thinking, open debate, participation in decision making, gender awareness, leadership and community service. The center strive to enhance the quality of the university's human resources and its partnership with civil society at the local, national, and international levels.

Moreover CSDC aims at equipping the university community (students, staff and faculty members) and the local community with interpersonal skills related to active and effective participation, positive attitude toward others, social tolerance, promoting gender awareness and non-violent conflict management.

The center also conducts research to establish baseline data on many social and political issues, such as management of change, youth employment, family protection, elections, gender awareness which helps defining the various developmental challenges facing Jordanian civil society.

Training workshops (inside and outside campus), invited speakers, field studies and visits, and recruiting volunteers are CSDC major activities.

☒ JUST Alumni Club

Jordan University of Science & Technology (JUST) Alumni Club was established on November 8th, 1993 by a group of J.U.S.T graduates under the umbrella of The Charity Social Solidarity Law under the Patronage of HRH Princess Haya.

The club aims at providing services to JUST graduates by offering a variety of scientific, social and entertainment activities for its members. The Alumni Club also seeks to build a sound ground for interaction and knowledge exchange with Jordanian Universities and scientific societies.
