

Training workshops conducted at JUST to establish, enhance and facilitate a holistic ethical organisational culture (2023).

Throughout 2023, Jordan University of Science and Technology (JUST) conducted a series of training workshops aimed at fostering a holistic ethical organizational culture. These workshops, spanning various aspects of academic and professional life, addressed key themes such as ethical student interaction, integrity in scientific research, and positive interaction between teachers and students. The sessions provided strategies for managing anger, understanding university regulations and policies governing student-faculty relationships, and oriented newly appointed faculty and staff on the university's ethical standards and organizational culture. With a focus on ethical conduct and positive interaction, these workshops aimed to establish and enhance a culture of integrity and respect within the institution, ensuring a conducive environment for academic and personal growth.
